Park Personality

For the following parks, find things that can establish their “personality”:

What are the parks known for? Is there something that can excite people that is unique to that park?

If there are park rangers, you can look to ask them about their experiences at the park and use the information to formulate park personality.

What to do at the parks:

- Highlighting the activities you can do at the specific park
- Essentially playing in to the park personality
- Specific post for each park with all the activities
- Pictures of people completing the actual activity
- Could go even more in-depth with showing more specifics for each

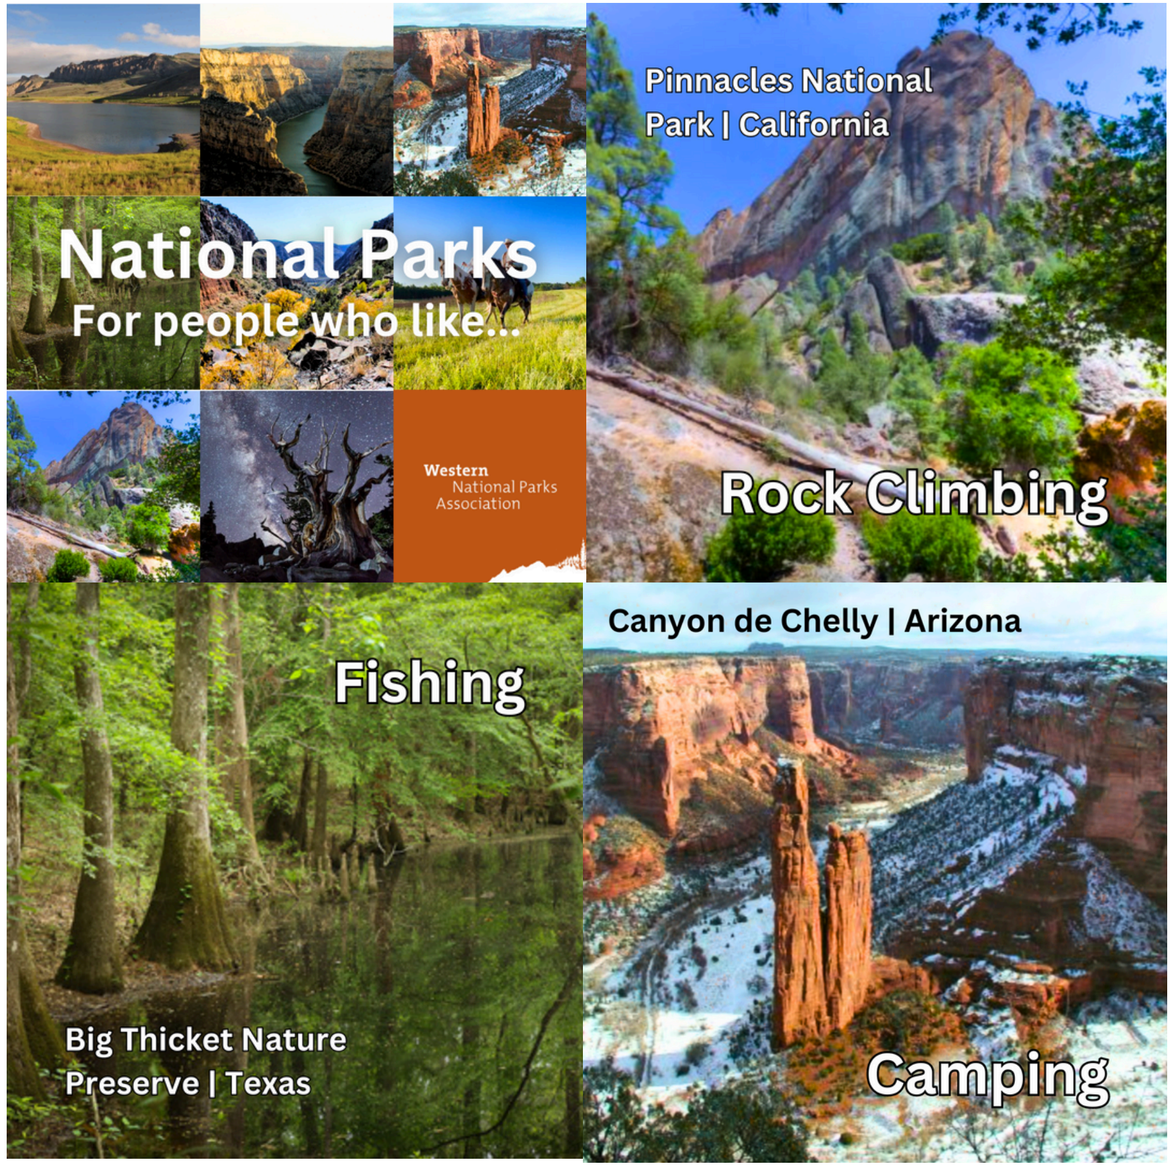

Sample Multi-slide Instagram Post

- Reframe as “Best parks for….” and showcase different activities
- targets regular park goers looking for new parks
- convey variety of activities at national parks
- Consolidated into one post with pretty pictures

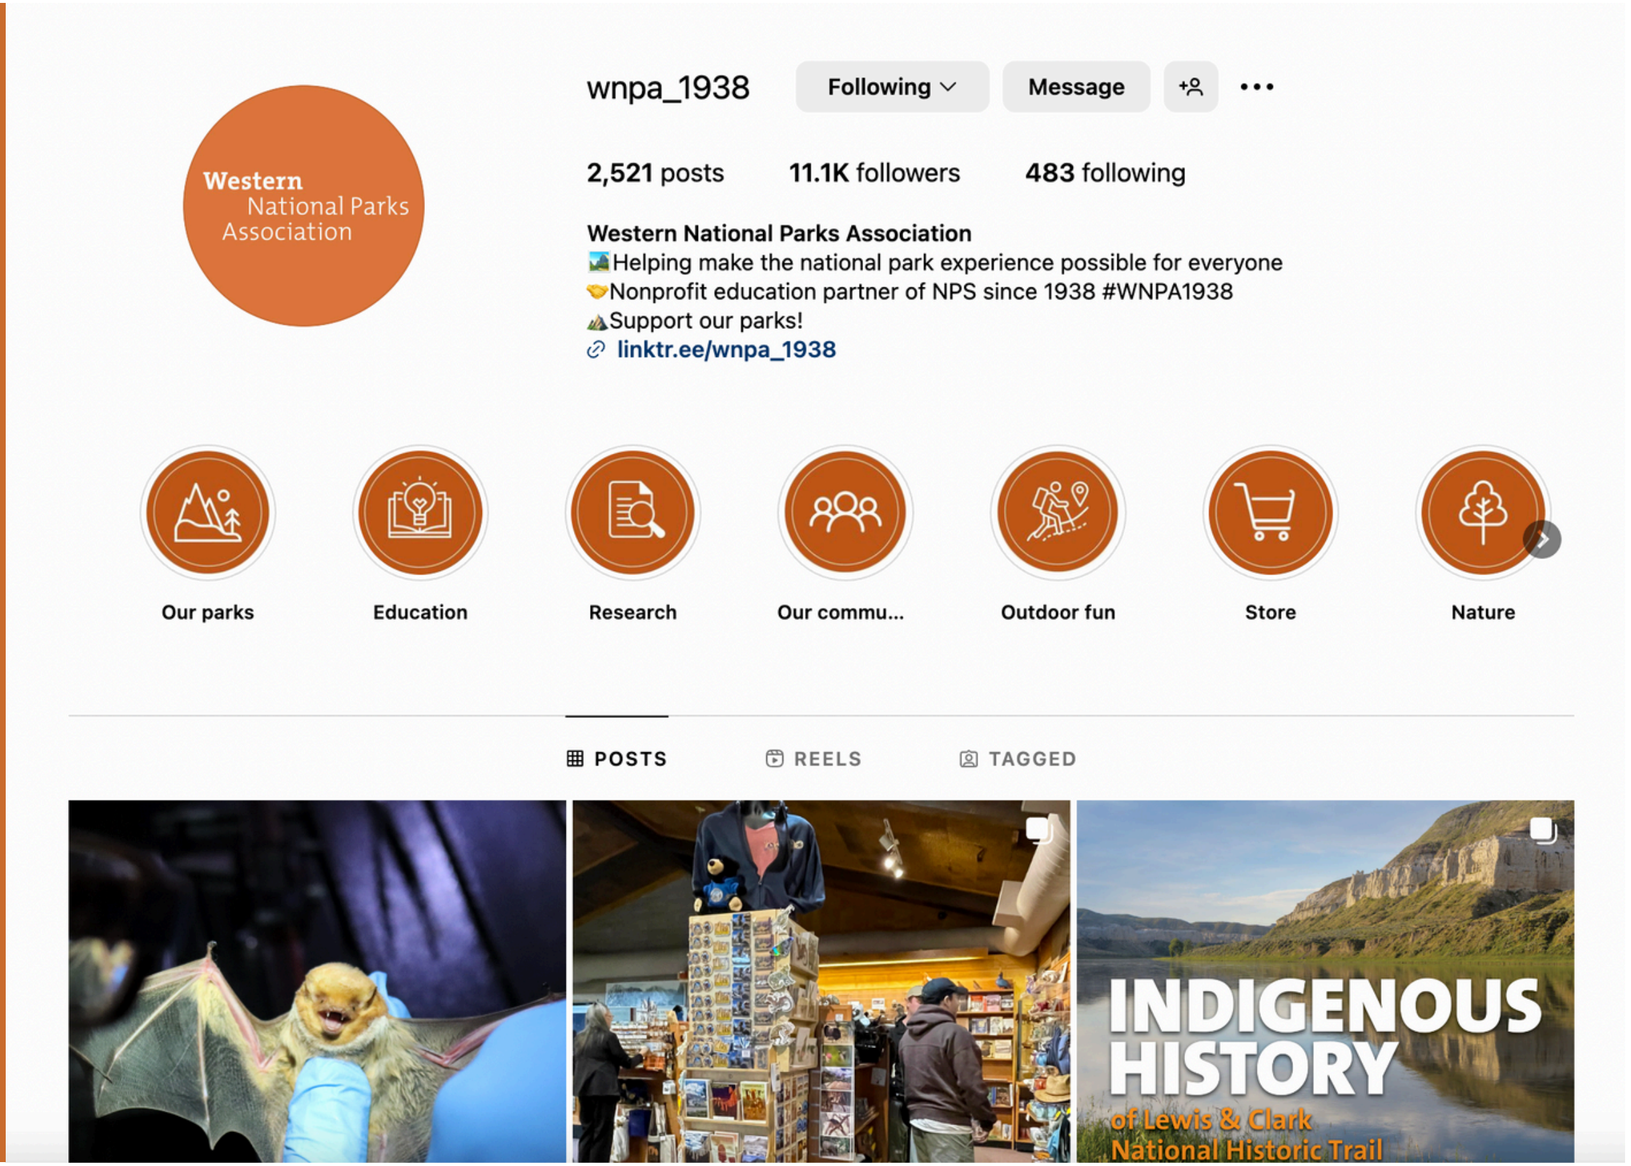

Social Media Changes

Convinience

- use highlights to organise annoucements
- keep outdated posts archived or simply post on Instagram story
- interactive stories (engagement)
- not just link on story, bullet point information, more accessible (refer to linkedtree links)

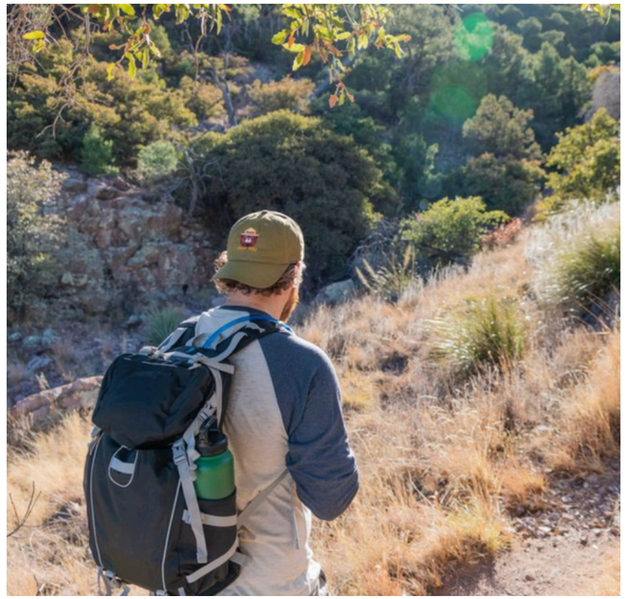

Aesthetics

- again, keep outdated posts archived or simply post on Instagram story (messy)
- engaging captions, can refer to click link in bio

Social Media Changes

Other ideas

- Direct Message or email other social media pages (@visittucson, TikToks)
- Add location tag
- shorter engaging captions
- promote specific things (ex: in your shop, specific site to see)

Park Weekend Itinerary

Highlighting Summer Concerts and Festivals around the parks.

Provide an itinerary for a weekend at the parks including what to do on and off NPS land.

Could create road trip itinerary for parks closer to big metropolitan areas. Include stops on the way and places to visit once in town.

Making Stories for national days like Earth Day

- Instead of doing actual posts for national days you can do story posts so you have more room to do other significant posts.
- Can tag the location of the park in the story post. For example, this story post is from the Channel Islands National Park in California.
